The 1986 Minors in Jails Report

Highlights

The Department of the Youth Authority collects data from local law enforcement agencies on the number of youths 17 or younger that were confined over six hours in adult jails, lockups, and holding facilities. Major findings of the data collection are listed below.

- o In 1986, there were 7,691 minors confined for periods in excess of six hours in adult jails, lockups, and holding facilities. This represents a decrease of 31.6% from the 11,249 minors held in 1984.
- o These confinements occurred in 74 facilities in 19 counties.
- o 3,180 (41.3%) of the confinements were in 38 county jails or sheriff's stations; 4,511 (58.7%) were in 36 city police facilities.
- o Of the total confinements, 543 (7.1%) were W&I 601 status offenders. Status offender confinements have decreased 44.1% from 1984 to 1986 (971 to 543).
- o 190 minors were confined in jails in excess of 24 hours during 1986. Since 1978, such confinements have decreased 90.7%. Since 1984, such confinements have decreased 60.8%.
- o The 190 minors confined over 24 hours included 6 status offenders, 17 youths 14-years or younger, and 34 females.
- o In addition, 83 of the 190 24-hour confinements were remands to adult court.
- o Jails in five of those counties without juvenile halls confined 13, or 6.8%, of the minors confined over 24 hours.

The 1986 Minors in Jails Report

This annual report presents information on the number of minors 17-years or younger securely confined in California adult jails, lockups, and holding facilities during calendar year 1986. The Department of the Youth Authority is authorized to collect these data by several sections of the State Welfare and Institutions Code: 207(e), 209, 828, and 1752.7. In addition, regulations of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP) require each state to provide for an adequate system of monitoring the population of jails and detention facilities and that the results of such monitoring be reported annually to OJJDP.

There are further reasons for the collection of jail monitoring data. The W&I Code directs the Youth Authority to inspect facilities that detain minors for periods in excess of 24 hours to ascertain that certain confinement standards have been met. The jail monitoring system is the method by which such facilities are identified.

Furthermore, these data collected by the Youth Authority represent the only information available on the number of minors confined in law enforcement facilities. The Department publishes annual reports as a service to the criminal justice community. Lastly, it is hoped that the information contained in these reports will be useful to local agencies in budget planning and assessing detention needs for juveniles within local jurisdictions.

Background of the Jail Monitoring System

In 1976, the Youth Authority began collecting information on the number of minors confined in local jails and lockups. Each year since then, the Department has collected data via an annual survey of law enforcement agencies. The annual survey asked how many minors were detained, for any length of time, during the previous year. The survey was also used to identify those facilities in which minors were confined for more than 24 hours.

In 1979, doubts began to arise about the accuracy of data on the number of minors in confinement. Contacts with law enforcement agencies indicated that it was difficult and sometimes impossible for them to accurately report the number of minors placed in confinement. Often, records were not kept, especially in those instances when minors spent only a few minutes or hours in confinement during routine processing.

1984 revision of data collection system. To remedy this situation, the Department obtained a grant from the State Office of Criminal Justice Planning to develop an improved data collection system. To assist the project, an advisory group was formed, comprised primarily of members of local law enforcement.

The advisory group agreed that data previously collected on minors in jails<sup>1</sup> were probably highly inaccurate because most agencies kept no special records and were either unable to provide an accurate count of confinements, or had to make laborious counts by manually searching through files dating back a year.

The project and advisory group developed a new system for collecting data. The annual survey concept was retained as a method of identifying those agencies that in fact confined minors. A new system was developed in which agencies that confined minors were required to report this information on a monthly basis to the Youth Authority. A further change was that jails were required to report only those confinements that exceeded six hours.

Two factors mediated in favor of using a six-hour minimum in the reporting of confinements. First, the advisory group believed that six hours was adequate time for an agency to complete routine processing and arrange for a minor's release or transfer to juvenile hall. Any minor held beyond the six-hour limit should be reported as a secure confinement. Second, the OJJDP monitoring guidelines required the reporting of only those confinements exceeding six hours.

New annual survey. A revised annual survey was introduced in 1984 (see Appendix A). Each law enforcement agency was asked to select one of four options to describe its policies and practices during the preceding year:

- (1) Minors were not securely confined.
- (2) Minors were securely confined, but none for more than 6 hours.
- (3) One or more minors were securely confined for more than 6 hours, but not in excess of 24 hours.
- (4) One or more minors were securely confined for more than 24 hours.

Agencies indicating options 1 or 2 were not required to participate in the data reporting system. Those agencies indicating either option 3 or 4 were requested to submit monthly reports.

New monthly report. The new monthly report (see Appendix B) asked agencies to provide the number of minors confined for more than six hours.

Additional information was requested on any minor confined in excess of 24 hours. These revised forms were used to collect data in 1984, 1985, and 1986. The system appeared to work efficiently. Those agencies that reported confining minors over six hours on the annual survey subsequently submitted all required monthly reports.

Impact of New Legislation

On January 1, 1987, Senate Bill 1637 became effective. This bill, which revised W&I Code Section 207, prohibits the use of adult jails for the confinement of minors, unless the minors are over 16 and have been transferred to adult court for proceedings on a serious or violent felony (W&I Code 707(b)). Lockups (defined separately from jails) may be used for the temporary confinement of minors--not to exceed six hours--if all of the following conditions are met:

- (1) The minor is 14 years or older;
- (2) The minor is charged with a criminal law violation (W&I 602);
and
- (3) The minor is believed to present "a serious security risk of harm to self and others."

Counties without juvenile halls have until July 1, 1988 for compliance with the prohibition of the use of adult jails for confinement of minors.

Enactment of SB 1637 makes the current monthly data collection report practically obsolete. The legislation continues to require the Youth Authority to collect data on minors placed in temporary secure confinement. The Department will introduce a new reporting format during 1987.

The 1986 Annual Survey of Jails, Lockups, and Holding Facilities

Data throughout the remainder of this report refer to minors in secure confinement during 1986 and prior to the enactment of SB 1637 on January 1, 1987.

The annual survey for 1986 was distributed in January 1987 to all law enforcement agencies. The Youth Authority maintains a roster of agencies and facilities which serves as a basic list for the survey. This roster includes only those agencies that have reported a secure confinement capability.<sup>2</sup> The roster is periodically revised as follows:

- (1) Agencies that indicate they do not have secure confinement capability are removed and placed on an inactive roster. They will be included in an annual survey only once every three years (to cover the event that a secure confinement facility was added during the interim period).
- (2) Minimum security and work-furlough-type facilities operated by sheriffs' departments are not included because they do not meet the definition of a jail or lockup with secure confinement capability.
- (3) As they come to the Department's attention, newly-created agencies or agencies not previously surveyed are added to the roster.

<sup>2</sup>Basically, if an agency uses any type of secure holding area, cell, or locked room, it is considered to have secure confinement capability, whether or not it is used for juveniles.

The 1986 annual survey was sent to 417 agencies contained in the active roster. Those agencies surveyed included 264 city police departments and 153 county jails and stations operated by sheriffs' departments. Seventeen of these agencies were dropped from the survey because the facility (1) closed, (2) reported it had no secure confinement capability, or (3) was found to be classified as a minimum security honor camp or work furlough program. Table 1 shows the results of the survey.

Of the 400 agencies that reported having secure confinement capability:

- o 93 (23.5%) held no minors at all (usually by policy).
- o 229 (57.3%) held minors, but never over 6 hours.

- o 56 (14.0%) held one or more minors for more than 6 hours, but never in excess of 24 hours.
- o 22 (5.5%) held one or more minors in excess of 24 hours. Five of these 22 agencies held only minors remanded to adult court under W&I Code 707(b). In addition, five other agencies were in counties without juvenile halls.

Monthly Confinement Reports

Table 1 indicates that 56 agencies held minors over 6 hours and 22 agencies held minors over 24 hours. Of these 78 agencies that held minors, 74 reported data on confinements using the monthly report form. The other four agencies reported on the annual survey that they had held one or more minors.

Number of Minors in Secure Confinement for More Than 6 Hours

Table 2 presents a compilation of the data on confinements during 1986, as submitted by 74 agencies using the monthly report form. Highlights of the statewide data are as follows:

- o 7,691 minors were confined for more than 6 hours during 1986 in 74 jails, lockups, and holding facilities.
- o 4,511 (58.7%) of the confinements occurred in city police department facilities.
- o 3,180 (41.3%) occurred in sheriff's facilities.
- o 543 W&I 601 status offenders were confined for more than 6 hours in law enforcement facilities. The majority (503) of the confinements were in police facilities.

Note. Data from the 1986 Annual Survey of Jails indicate that two additional agencies held one or more minors over 6 but less than 24 hours. Two other agencies reported holding one or more adult court remands over 24 hours. The number of such confinements was not available for any of these four agencies.

a/ These are county jails and sheriff substation facilities. County jails are classified as Type II facilities. Most substations are Type I facilities. These facility classifications are based on definitions established by the State Board of Corrections. These may differ slightly from the definitions of jails and lockups contained in Senate Bill 1637.

Decreasing confinements. Table 3 shows the number of reported confinements in 1984, 1985, and 1986, the former being the first year of the revised data collection system. The total number of confinements decreased 31.6%, from 11,249 in 1984 to 7,691 in 1986. The decrease was even greater for status offender confinements: 44.1%, from 971 to 543.

A decrease in confinements occurred even though juvenile arrests increased 6.2% over the same period. Confinements--as a percentage of total arrests--decreased from 5.1% in 1984 to 3.3% in 1986. Eighty agencies reported confining one or more minors in 1984. There was a slight decrease to 74 agencies in 1986. The data indicate that, although about the same number of agencies confined minors in 1986, these agencies reduced confinements by nearly a third (31.6%).

Counties with and without juvenile halls. The number of jail confinements in counties with and without juvenile halls is shown in Table 4. Minors were confined in jails in 19 counties. (There were 7,602 confinements in 12 counties with juvenile halls and 89 confinements in seven of the counties without juvenile halls. (Eight counties without juvenile halls did not confine any minors in jails.)

Confinements in Excess of 24 Hours

There were 190 minors reported held over 24 hours during 1986. Data on these cases are shown in Table 5. Confinements by individual facilities are shown in Appendix C. There were six W&I 601 youths included in the 190 24-hour-plus confinements. Of the total confinements, 82.1% were males and 8.9% were 14-years or younger. Confinements of W&I 707(b) remanded youths

a/ 20 agencies submitted reports on confinements over 24 hours. Two additional agencies (Santa Cruz Co. Jail and Santa Barbara - Santa Maria Co. Jail) reported that confinements over 24 hours occurred, but an actual count was not available. Any minors held in these two facilities were W&I 707(b) remands.

Counties with and without juvenile halls. Table 6 shows the number of minors confined in jails for more than 24 hours in counties with and without juvenile halls. Fifteen agencies in seven counties with juvenile halls held 177 minors over 24 hours. Five agencies in five counties without halls held 13 minors over 24 hours. Of the 177 confinements in counties with halls, 83 were adult court remands.

Trends in 24-Hour Confinements

Table 7 shows the number of minors confined in jails over 24 hours during each year from 1978 through 1986. Since 1978, 24-hour confinements have decreased 90.7%, from 2,051 to 190. Of the 190 24-hour confinements, over half (113) were minors remanded pursuant to W&I Code Section 707.

ANNUAL REPORT ON THE SECURE CONFINEMENT OF MINORS IN JAILS, LOCKUPS, OR HOLDING FACILITIES

The Department of the Youth Authority is required by the State Welfare and Institutions Code to obtain data from local agencies that securely confine minors. In addition, the Department is required to gather certain information in order to comply with the Federal Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act. This report meets these requirements.

DEFINITIONS (for the purpose of this report)

Secure confinement is confinement in a locked cell, holding cell, or other locked room. An agency is considered to have secure confinement capability if the physical setting includes a cell or room with a lockable door designed (or converted) for the sole purpose of securely holding persons--regardless of length of confinement.

Jail is a locked facility, the purpose of which is to confine persons charged with violating the law, pending trial. Also, those facilities used to hold convicted offenders sentenced for less than one year. This includes minimum security facilities classified as Type III or IV facilities by the State Board of Corrections.

Lockup is similar to a jail except that a lockup is not required to have sleeping accommodations. A lockup generally holds persons for 24 hours or less, pending release, and does not hold persons after they have been formally charged.

Holding Facility is any physical setting other than a jail or lockup in which persons are temporarily confined behind a locked door while investigation and processing occurs.

INSTRUCTIONS

This report (blue form) is to be completed once each year by all law enforcement agencies. When the Department of the Youth Authority receives a report indicating that a local agency has confined one or more minors for more than six hours, the Department requests that the local agency supply additional information on the monthly report (yellow form).

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

The yellow report (YA 10.402) is designed to record information on minors confined for more than six hours. If your agency has confined one or more minors for more than six hours during the previous calendar year, you are requested to complete a yellow report each month of the current year and submit it by the 10th of the following month.

Please return this blue form (and the yellow form, if required) by the 10th of February. Those agencies that report having confined minors for more than six hours will be sent a supply of yellow monthly reports. If you need assistance, call the CYA's Jail Data Section at (916) 427-4832.
