PREFACE

There is a need for a guide for college and university graduates -- and those students anticipating graduation -- to explain in detail the career opportunities in criminal justice and related fields. Frequently these people know basically WHAT they want to do but often lack information on WHERE they can obtain employment and HOW they should apply for a job with a particular agency.

With these thoughts in mind, the following data was compiled from current publications and personal interviews with representatives of various criminal justice organizations. The first part of the presentation develops the different types of POSITIONS that are available to those persons with a degree in criminal justice or a related subject and/or those persons who are interested in job opportunities that do not require a college education. A general definition and listing of duties are given for each category. The second half analyzes the different types of public-funded AGENCIES according to the positions within them and the educational and past employment requirements, the salary and advancement possibilities that can be expected, their geographic locations, and how to apply or obtain more information. In this manner, the students are made aware of the types of employment possibilities that are available to them and the places of employment that can and do use their services.

At a later date, a manpower-need evaluation will be supplemented to this report. It is understood that the complete presentation must be reviewed and updated periodically if it is for future use. The liberty is also taken that additional positions and agencies may be added as they are made known.

The appendices include lists of the names and addresses of the major organizations within the state. This section is primarily for those students who wish to know how to contact a particular agency for further information or for an interview. Also included in the appendices is a suggested reading list to allow the readers to pursue their areas of interest.

THE CONTENTS OF THIS BOOK ARE NOT MEANT TO BE ALL INCLUSIVE OF THE TOTAL EMPLOYING AGENCIES OR TOTAL EMPLOYMENT POSITIONS WITHIN THOSE AGENCIES LISTED HEREIN. NEEDLESS TO SAY, THERE ARE MANY PRIVATELY FUNDED ORGANIZATIONS WHICH CAN AND DO USE THE SERVICES OF SOCIAL SCIENCE MAJORS. THERE ARE ALSO MANY MORE PUBLIC FUNDED AGENCIES THAN ARE DISCUSSED IN THIS PUBLICATION BUT ARE NOT STATEWIDE, i.e. HAVE ONLY ONE OFFICE IN TEXAS OR SERVE A LIMITED MUNICIPAL AREA.

THE RATIONALE OF THE JOB INFORMATION CENTER FOR CORRECTIONS

The criminal justice system is the institution charged with direct responsibility for the prevention and control of crime and related social problems. The three main components in this field are the police (the enforcement agencies), the courts (the judicial agencies), and corrections (the treatment and rehabilitation agencies). There are many persons, though not directly employed in these areas, who are constantly involved in one aspect or another of the criminal justice system. The person who has chosen such a career may be responsible for the administration of criminal and juvenile justice or may be providing services to social rehabilitation and social service agencies. Working anywhere in the criminal justice system provides the opportunity to contribute to the common goal: prevention and control of crime and delinquency, protection of society, justice for the individual, and rehabilitation of the offender.

In July, 1973, the Texas Criminal Justice Council approved funds for the establishment of a Job Information Center for Corrections in Texas. The major goal of the Center is to serve the manpower needs of the criminal justice system agencies by providing a linkage between the agencies and qualified personnel. Each of the colleges and universities in Texas having criminal justice or related programs will be utilizing the resources developed by the Center. Cooperation from both the employers and qualified applicants will provide the state of Texas with a system which supports both the agencies' special employment needs and the Texas graduate who has criminal justice credentials and seeks employment with these agencies.

In order for a student or anyone else who is interested in working for a criminal justice agency in any capacity to benefit from the services of the Job Information Center, he/she should call or write the Center requesting a student application packet. When completed, this packet contains an application form, three letters of recommendation, a resume, and official transcripts of all college courses. Upon receipt by the Center, this packet is considered "active" and is automatically referred to applicable employment positions listed with the Center in which the applicant has expressed interest and for which the applicant is qualified. There is no charge to the applicant or to the employing agencies for this service.

Although a personal interview with a Job Information Center counselor is strongly recommended, it is not required. Periodically members of the Center counseling staff will visit the campuses of those Texas colleges and universities which have a large number of students majoring in the social service fields. The Center will be coordinating its activities closely with the placement offices and department heads of all colleges and universities within the state. Information as to whether the Job Information Center staff will be visiting any campus can be obtained through the placement office of that school. If the staff is not visiting a particular campus, interested students should contact the Job Information Center directly by mail or through the placement office of the campus involved.

The applicants may bring the completed packet (with the exception of the letters of recommendation) to the interview or mail it directly to the Center headquarters. The interview may serve the purpose of simply providing information or answers to questions if the student does not wish to register with the Center or is not yet eligible for employment scholastically.

For further information or to request a student application packet, one should contact

Although in the following text and appendices addresses of the local and state offices of various employing agencies are provided, students are urged to complete the Center's packet and return it for processing. Representatives of the Center endeavor to know which employment positions are available and the qualifications for each. Of course, the Center may not be aware at all times of every position that is open. It is on these occasions that the applicant may use with discretion the agency addresses provided. However, registering with the Center insures consideration for many jobs of which the applicant may be unaware.

SPECIAL NOTE ON CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYMENT

The United States Civil Service Commission is the personnel department of the executive branch of the federal government. It not only maintains an information center and publishes materials concerning employment positions but also accepts and processes applications for these positions.

Most available federal jobs are filled through the merit system, which means that each applicant is in competition with other applicants according to educational and employment experience. However, each area office does not accept applications for all kinds of jobs all the time. Opportunities to apply for specific types of positions are announced when there is a need to fill such positions. The announcements tell about the jobs -- what experience or education you must have before your application will be accepted, whether a written test is required, where the jobs are located, what the pay is, and so on. The salary table is given on the following page.

The professional and Administrative Career Examination (PACE) replaces the Federal Service Entrance Examination (FSEE). PACE serves as a principal means of entry into the Federal civil service for college graduates and others with appropriate responsible work experience. PACE, like its predecessor, is a single examination used to fill a variety of entrance-level positions of a professional, administrative, or technical nature.

Applications are accepted from students who expect to complete within nine months courses which would permit them to meet the qualification requirements of the position for which they are applying.

To be eligible for employment consideration under this examination you must meet the experience and/or education requirements outlined below and score sufficiently high on those parts of the written test battery which are most related to the type of job being filled.

1. For grade GS-5 positions: A bachelor's degree or 3 years of responsible experience; or an equivalent combination of education and experience.
2. For grade GS-7 positions -- One of these: a. A bachelor's degree plus one year of graduate study; or an LL.B or J.D. degree from a recognized law school; or 4 years of responsible experience; or an equivalent combination of education and experience. b. A bachelor's degree, an earned rating of 90 or above in the written test, and either a 2.9 grade-point average on a 4.0 scale in all undergraduate courses, or rank in the upper third of your class, or membership in a national honorary scholastic society (other than freshman societies) recognized by the Association of College Honor Societies.

Applicants with advanced degrees (master's or higher) or more experience than is required to qualify under this examination may also wish to file under the Mid-level Positions Announcement, which covers most of the same occupations at grades GS-9 through GS-12. Information is available at any U.S. Civil Service Commission Office. For Grade 9 Positions, the requirements are generally two full years of graduate study, a master's degree, or a law degree (based on at least six full years of college work leading to an LL.B. or J.D.; or five years of qualifying experience; or an equivalent combination. Usually no test is required. For Grade 11 Positions, the requirements are generally successful completion of all requirements for the doctoral degree; or three full years of qualifying experience; or an equivalent combination.

Eligible candidates are referred to Federal agencies for consideration in the order of their ratings under the ability pattern appropriate for the positions to be filled, with the highest standing eligibles referred first. For some positions requiring special skills, only persons possessing the necessary qualifications are referred.

All tests are administered on Saturdays at the Texas locations listed below. The November and January tests will be given on November 16, 1974, and January 11, 1975. The test will not be administered in December 1974, February 1975, or April 1975. The test will be given in January, March, and May of 1975 on the Saturday of each month indicated to the right of the examination location listed below. The application must be received not later than October 31 to be scheduled for the November 1974 test, and not later than the 20th day of each preceding month for tests given in 1975. Submission of applications after these cut-off dates will result in applicants being scheduled for the test in the next following month.

There are certain positions within the civil service that require a test particular to those openings in addition to or in place of the PACE.

Federal job opportunities are usually widely advertised on college campuses and elsewhere. College placement officers have information about federal jobs and also about the dates federal recruiters will visit each campus. Guidance on how to go about applying for any specific kind of federal job can also be obtained from any Texas federal job information center.

When writing for information, one should give a brief description of his/her education, work experience, and the kind of job being sought. Telephone numbers may be found under the United States Government listing in the telephone directory in cities where federal information centers are located. If the caller is outside the local telephone dialing area, he/she can dial a toll-free number. In the Gulf Coast area, the number is 1-800-392-4970; in the Northern area, 1-800-492-4400; in the South Central area, 1-800-292-5611; and in the Western area, 1-800-592-7000.

Some jobs are not under civil service. Applications for such positions should be made to the agencies in which they are located. A number of them are located outside the continental United States, and some of them operate their own merit system. The United States Information Agency, the Agency for International Development, and the Peace Corps are agencies which have a number of positions in foreign countries. The Foreign Service of the State Department, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the Central Intelligence Agency operate separate merit systems. For additional information on opportunities with most of these non-civil service agencies, the reader is referred to a later section of this book.

The types of employment positions under the federal civil service system that are of interest to social service majors are claims examiners, customs inspectors, investigators, narcotic agents, revenue officers, social service representatives, intelligence specialists, and many more. A detailed discussion of each of these areas of employment follows in the publication. These civil service agencies discussed in Chapter IV are marked with an asterisk (*).

EMPLOYMENT POSITIONS

ADMINISTRATORS

Correctional administrators hold positions as the directors of a state department or division of corrections of a state-wide adult or youth authority. They are chairpersons of the state board of parole or the superintendents of state institution. They may be the directors of public welfare if juvenile corrections, for example, are administered by their departments. The chief administrative officers of state-wide departments or divisions or corrections or correctional services are usually political appointees chosen by the governor of the state or by the official in charge of a major division of state government. On the other hand, they may be selected by members of the board of directors who are political appointees.

At an administrative level slightly lower than that of the director of a state-wide department or division of corrections are the administrators of the subdepartments, usually chosen according to the function they perform, such as director of custody, director of treatment, director of records, the financial officer, and so on. Adult institutions are under the care of wardens and assistant wardens; juvenile institutions under superintendents or directors.

At the local level, the superintendents of a juvenile detention facility are administrative officers, as are the chief probation officers of an adult or juvenile probation department. Local correctional administrators are chosen in many ways; typically, they are moved to an administrative position after serving as probation or parole officers or some other lower level positions.

Administrators in the social service agencies usually have the duties of coordinating programs relative to the purposes of the particular agency. Often a regional or area supervisor may oversee the activities of smaller departments. The policy-making decisions may be made at this level in order to insure a uniform method of operation for those institutions with departments throughout the state.

COUNSELORS

The term "counseling" in the criminal justice system has a very broad meaning and may entail a wide variety of duties, depending upon the type of employing agency and the clientele with whom the counselor works. The primary objectives of professional counseling are to help persons understand themselves and their opportunities better so that they can make and carry out decisions and plans that hold potential for a satisfying and productive life.

Rehabilitation counselors are concerned primarily with the vocational and personal adjustment of persons handicapped in various ways, whether physically, mentally, or socially. They arrange for and participate in the initial evaluation of the person applying for services. When the applicant is accepted, they help that person obtain the needed services. They assist in realistically defining and selecting a field of work for which to train. When the client is ready to go to work, the counselors help in obtaining a job. Rehabilitation may involve not only physical but also mental and social reconditioning.

The clinical psychologists concentrate on helping people with emotional or adjustment problems. They interview patients, give diagnostic tests, and provide individual and group therapy.

The psychiatrists are medical doctors who, through additional years of training and experience, have become specialists in the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of mental disorders. The use of drugs, shock therapy, and psychotherapy has become a significant aspect of the psychiatrists' work.

CUSTODIAL OFFICERS

Since security is an essential element in the correctional system, a considerable number of personnel are employed as custodial guards. These guards maintain a watch over the inmate population to insure that there are no escapes. They enforce rules and regulations governing the operation of a correctional institution and the confinement, safety, health, and protection of inmates. They also supervise work assignments of inmates and, to a limited degree, counsel inmates on personal and family problems.

In a juvenile institution, the custodial guard may be called a "youth activities supervisor" or a similar term. Various duties include the counseling of students, supervising recreation and study activities, and maintaining order, discipline, and cleanliness in an assigned living area.

HOUSEPARENTS

Houseparents perform responsible child guidance and parental care for children in a state or private school, orphanage, or correctional home. Since most of these agencies operate on a twenty-four-hour-a-day schedule, the houseparents usually reside on the campus with facilities provided for their room and board. Their work involves perpetuating a harmonious homelike environment for children; assuming responsibility for physical and personal well being; and promoting social, emotional, spiritual, and intellectual growth. They also assign and assist with housekeeping duties and maintain periodic inventories, records, and reports. They perform routine duties independently but frequently confer with their supervisor or professional staff member on unusual or difficult problems.

LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS

As local government employees, the police officer's job is to prevent criminal activities, to investigate crimes, and to apprehend and assist in the prosecution of offenders. Most police officers are detailed whether to patrol or traffic duty; smaller numbers are assigned to special work, such as accident prevention or operation of communication systems. Some officers are detectives (plain-clothespersons) assigned to criminal investigation; others are experts in chemical and microscopic analysis, firearms identification, and handwriting and fingerprinting identification. In very large cities, a few officers may be trained to work with special units such as mounted and motorcycle police, harbor patrols, helicopter patrols, canine corps, mobile rescue teams, and youth aid services.

The college or university security officer's duties are usually general security of campus and buildings, the enforcing of traffic and parking regulations, first aid, and the protection of property and personnel in the campus setting. Most schools make provisions for their own security force; however, the smaller ones may make arrangements with the municipal police department or private agencies for their security personnel.

State policemen (sometimes called state highway patrolmen or troopers) are protective service officers whose primary responsibility is to enforce the law and regulations governing the use of highways. The jurisdiction of the state police in such matters as thefts, murders, and narcotic violations is usually limited to those areas that do not maintain their own police forces.

Law enforcement agents employed in the federal system have power as to federal offenses only. They may investigate such violations as bank robberies, kidnappings, frauds against the government, thefts of government property, espionage, and sabotage. Other types of federal officers may operate in restricted areas and serve a limited population (for example, Indian agents and military policemen).

LAWYERS

Lawyers admitted to the bar of the state become the prosecutors and defense attorneys in the criminal justice system.

The prosecutors aid in making the decision to charge the suspect with a crime and the nature of the charge. They conduct trials, appear before the courts of criminal appeal, represent the state in habeas corpus proceedings, are assigned to recommend the governor's action in extradition, and go before the legislature to recommend or oppose penal reform. Attorneys General of Texas are elected. The prosecuting attorneys of a district or county are usually elected officials; an appointed or elected city attorney acts as the prosecutor in most municipal courts. The prosecutors in a juvenile court may be county or district attorneys or assistants assigned to handle juvenile cases, or they may be employees of the court or its probation department. Prosecuting attorneys are variously called state's attorneys, county attorneys, district attorneys, and prosecutors.

The defense attorneys advise their client of their rights and obligations and, when necessary, represent them in a court of law. They must be present at the interrogation of the accused. The accused must also be represented at the line-up, at the preliminary hearing, at the arraignment, and at the trial. Counsel is also required at a probation revocation hearing and at a parole revocation hearing. Indigents must be provided with counsel at state expense.

Prisoners incarcerated in the prison system may be provided a lawyer employed by that agency for the purposes of assisting them with appeals, writs, etc.

MEDICAL EMPLOYEES

Many of the larger penal institutions and social service agencies employ their own medical staff, including doctors, nurses, and aides. Others contract for the services of professionals in private practice. One of the more recent and faster growing aspects of this profession lies in the increase of drug service agencies, both public and private, which require a specially trained medical staff.

PROBATION AND PAROLE OFFICERS

Probation and parole are similar correctional services whose officers provide supervisory and casework services to convicted offenders who reside in the community rather than in an institution.

Probation officers are customarily employed by the local court, whether it be a county court or a district court, and are responsible to the chief probation officer, who is responsible to the chief judge of the court. Parole officers are customarily employees of the state and under the direction of the state parole board. In some states throughout the country, the state system provides both probation and parole services, and a single officer supervises both probationers and parolees.

There are two stated goals or objectives in the providing of probation and parole services. The first is the protection of society; the second is the rehabilitation of the individual.

In order to achieve the first goal, the probation/parole officer is expected to monitor the activities of the probationer/parolee to ascertain whether the client is abiding by the rules of probation/parole. If the probation/parole officer discovers that the client has committed serious violations, the officer is expected to initiate action against the client, such as discussing and reprimanding the client; and if the violation is more serious, the officer will initiate action to return the client to prison. In the case of the probationers, their probation is revoked and they are sent to prison by the sentencing judge. This activity is considered the law enforcement aspect of a probation/parole officer's job.

The second aspect of the probation/parole officer's job is more in the nature of social work. In order to assist the client in the rehabilitation the officer may offer personal counseling, job referral service, and any other type of assistance which will help the client adjust and abide by the conditions of the probation or parole and to adjust to society without further violations of the law.

RESEARCHERS

Research in the criminal justice field covers a broad spectrum of activity. Researchers may find themselves involved specifically with a small segment of the over-all system, or, on the other hand, many times they look at the relationship between the different components within criminal justice. To define types of research which is currently being produced, it is best to look at common models of research. These models include the experimental, the historical, and the statistical descriptive, or more commonly known as the "survey models."

The experimental model is most commonly found within colleges and universities, and adheres closely to the scientific method. This model typically employs the concept of a control group and is designed to answer specific questions about the relationship between units of interest. For example, to determine whether or not some given program within a criminal justice agency is producing desired results, the experimental model may be appropriate to set up groups of study and to monitor the study from start to finish, collecting data and analyzing the results.

The historical model is one which is used not only the the colleges and universities but in field agencies as well. Many times field agencies desire to know how their present operating procedures and problems are related to those same problems found in the history of an organization. By systematic study of an agency's history and projections of future problems, possible solutions can be made.

The statistical model, also known as the "survey," is a most commonly used approach in research both in colleges and universities and the field agencies. The objectives in this type of research are to determine the frequency of occurrence of different types of variables of interest. For example, in a correctional institution, it may be of interest to know the descriptive backgrounds of a certain type of offender. These backgrounds would be in terms of age, socioeconomic status, and educational status of those committing a certain type of crime. When these descriptive backgrounds are compared to other types of crime, hopefully projections can be made concerning the future occurrence of crime types, or at least a better understanding of the types of individuals involved in these felonies can be given.

The equipment with which criminal justice researchers work varies from simple pencil and paper to the most complex computer systems available. It is not legitimate to say that good research must be made with expensive equipment. Research is something that people do every day of their lives. Any question that arises that demands an answer requires processes of achieving that answer -- by definition this process is "research." Researchers are involved at all levels of the criminal justice system and do contribute a great deal of knowledge. Many times the researcher is on the forefront of new methods, new procedures, new philosophy of programs for agencies to implement within the system.

SOCIAL WORKERS (CASEWORKERS)

Jobs in social work are as numerous and diverse as the people who require social services. Social work with children, for example, can be found in foster and adoptive homes, child guidance clinics, schools, day care centers, and hospitals. Casework with teen-agers and young adults is offered by organizations such as community centers and clubs, drug addiction centers, and correctional institutions. Social workers also work with the elderly in recreational centers, private residences, hospitals, and community clinics. But this area is only part of the picture. There is a great deal to be done in rehabilitation centers and training schools for the mentally retarded and the physically handicapped. Those with an ability in planning find ample opportunity to work with community leaders and groups on urban-renewal teams, model cities programs, and community projects to meet the demand for health and welfare needs.

Social workers in family service positions in state and local governments and voluntary agencies provide counseling and social services that strengthen family life and help clients to improve their social functioning. They also advise their clients on the constructive use of financial assistance and other social services.

Social workers in child welfare positions in government and voluntary agencies improve the physical and emotional well-being of deprived and troubled children and youth. They advise parents on child care and child rearing, counsel children and youth with social adjustment difficulties, institute legal action for the protection of neglected or mistreated children, provide services to unmarried parents, and counsel couples who wish to adopt children. They may place children in suitable adoption or foster homes or in specialized institutions.

Some social workers provide services for patients in mental health centers, hospitals, or clinics. As members of teams composed of psychiatrists, psychologists, and other professional personnel, they develop and report information on the patient's family and social background for use in diagnosis and treatment. They help patients respond to treatment and guide them in their homes, jobs, and communities. They have particular responsibility for helping the families of patients to understand the nature of the illness. Social workers also participate in community mental health programs concerned with the prevention of mental illness and readjustment of mental patients to normal community living.

Caseworkers in rehabilitation services assist emotionally or physically disabled persons in adjusting to the demands of everyday living. As part of a rehabilitation team, which usually includes physical or occupational therapists, these social workers serve as a link with the community while patients are in the hospital; later, they help them adjust to home and community life.

Social workers attached to court clinics, or working in jails or correctional institutions, can provide a variety of important services to both the court and the offender. Since they are skilled in obtaining the kind of information needed in a pre-sentence report, they can provide the judge with an important sentencing tool. Social workers in a jail keep the accused persons in contact with their families and provide them with numerous essential personal services which they can obtain in no other way. Social workers in adult correctional institutions are an important link between the inmates and the outside world, particularly their families.

Social workers also play a significant role in the prevention of crime and delinquency, whether they are attached to a community social service agency or directly to the criminal justice system. Whatever they can accomplish in developing and maintaining family cohesion, ameliorating the effects of joblessness, reducing the school dropout rate, or increasing the participation in vocational training helps to prevent crime and delinquency.

TEACHERS

Academic

The inmate student population in correctional programs is usually composed of individuals in their late teens or early twenties. Although they are generally not particularly deficient in basic intelligence, most of them are at an educational level somewhere in grade school. In addition to serving those students who are illiterate, the instructor within the criminal justice system may be teaching such courses as math, English, social studies, languages, and science. A category of "special subjects" include music, health and physical education, arts and crafts, drama, and others.

Most full-time college and university teachers in the criminal justice and related fields instruct in the areas of law enforcement, sociology, psychology, criminal justice, and social work. Teaching duties may include preparing and delivering lectures, leading class discussions, preparing tests and instruction materials, counseling and assisting individual students, and checking and grading assignments and tests. In addition to actual classroom work, many college teachers conduct or direct research, write for publication, or aid in college administration. Some act as consultants to various youth organizations or other social service agencies.

Vocational

Vocational instructors in a correctional setting have two purposes: the inmates are to be trained so that they may serve a productive role while serving their sentences and are trained so that they may enter employment and assume a meaningful role in society upon release. Vocational courses offered vary according to the age and sex of the inmates as well as the type of institution in which they are incarcerated. Examples of vocational courses are business courses (shorthand, typing, bookkeeping, etc.), machine shop, welding, carpentry, home economics, cosmetology, radio-t.v. repair, plumbing, bricklaying, auto mechanics, agriculture, plus many more.

Special Education

Special education teachers work with the public who are mentally deficient or physically handicapped. Speech pathologists and audiologists, for example, work with children and adults who have speech, language, voice, and/or hearing problems resulting from brain injury, birth defects, mental retardation, emotional problems, or other causes. Many of the special education teachers work to provide training, guidance, and supervision for the blind. Teachers also work with children and adults who have emotional problems. The mentally retarded or slow-learning student also needs special teachers. Some of these students attend residential institutions. If, however, the community is equipped to handle such problems, they are able to live at home and be educated in a public school. Regardless of where they are taught, however, they need teachers who have been specially trained to help them.

COUNTY PROBATION DEPARTMENTS

County Probation Officer

Qualifications: The prior employment and educational requirements vary from county to county. The smaller departments usually do not require a college degree. However, the trend is toward at least a bachelor's degree being required, with the larger metropolitan departments preferring an advanced degree.

Salary range and advancement potential: The beginning salary depends primarily upon the population of the county. The minimum salary is in the neighborhood of $500/month to a maximum of approximately $900/month. An adequate monthly car allowance is normally supplemented.

Geographic locations: All densely populated counties have a probation department, with the sparsely populated ones sometimes sharing a central office.

How to apply or obtain more information: Contact the department in which you are interested at the address in Appendix B.

EMPLOYING AGENCIES

Border Patrol Agents

Qualifications: A written test and oral interview are required. Applicants must be in sound physical condition and of sturdy physical development. They must also demonstrate a speaking, reading, and writing command of the Spanish language, or acquire this ability within one year after appointment.

Salary and advancement potential: Entry level grade is GS-7. After a one-year probationary period, agents are eligible for promotion; and those who demonstrate the ability to perform the full range of duties may be eligible for another promotion after another two years. There are additional opportunities for promotion or transfer to positions in other fields in the service or to supervisory-level positions in the Border Patrol.

Geographic locations: Officers are located throughout the United States and in Europe, Bermuda, Nassau, Puerto Rico, Canada, Mexico, and the Philippines.

Deputy U.S. Marshals

Qualifications: Candidates must have had a minimum of three years of qualifying general experience. Study successfully completed in an accredited college or university may be substituted at the rate of one year of study for nine months general experience, for a maximum of three years of general experience. Successful completion of a full four-year course of college study may be substituted for three years of general experience. In addition, a written test, an employment interview, physical requirements, and an investigation of fitness must be met.

Salary and advancement potential: Deputies enter at the GS-5 grade level and are normally promoted to GS-7 after one year and then to GS-9 one year later depending upon the length of service. Positions above these levels are filled through service-wide competition. Any progression beyond GS-9 level will often require reassignment to another district at government expense in keeping with the career mobility concept.

Geographic locations: Deputy U.S. marshals are located in the 94

U.S. judicial districts which cover the 50 states, Panama Canal Zone, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION *

Claims Representatives

Qualifications: A BA or BS in almost any field is required. No prior experience is necessary. A written test is also among the pre-requisites.

Salary range and advancement potential: Trainees normally enter at the GS-5. After a year of satisfactory job performance they are promoted non-competitively to GS-9; and at the end of three years of successful work to the journeyman GS-10. Further advancement is competitive, under merit promotion procedures. Positions at grades beyond the claims representative are management jobs, both in the field offices and the regional office, from GS-11 through GS-15.

Geographic location: Upon completion of training, assignments to permanent duty stations are made to an office where a vacancy exists in the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Texas. Because it is necessary to recruit trainees well in advance of vacancies, it is difficult to hire a trainee for a specific location.

How to apply or obtain more information: Contact the Federal Civil Service Center nearest you as listed in Chapter II or your local civil service commission.

TEXAS COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Academic Teachers -- Criminal Justice, Law Enforcement, Psychology, Social Work, Sociology

Qualifications: The minimum qualifications in general for a faculty position are usually a master's degree in a related field with experience in the field preferred. Many of the larger departments require a Ph.D. or equivalent with experience either in teaching or administration. The emphasis for law enforcement instructors, particularly in junior colleges, appears to be on-the-job experience rather than a terminal degree.

Salary and advancement potential: Many of the salaries are listed as "negotiable," which means the starting pay depends upon the education and experience of the applicant and subsequent teaching rank. Usually the beginning base pay is approximately $1000/month for the nine-month academic year. This salary may be supplemented by summer teaching, consultant fees, etc.

Geographic locations: Colleges and universities throughout the state employ teaching personnel, the majority of which are located in the urban areas.

How to apply or obtain more information: Contact the department chairman of the college or university in which you are interested.

Campus Security Officers

Qualifications: Although a few of the larger campus security departments require a college degree, the minimum educational qualifications are usually a high school diploma, with some departments preferring or requiring college courses. In addition, there are certain physical requirements, which vary from department to department, that must be met.

Salary range and advancement potential: The beginning salaries vary from campus to campus. The salary range is from $400-650/month. Promotions usually occur as vacancies occur and are dependent upon length and quality of employment.

Geographic locations: The colleges and universities in Texas that employ their own security force are listed in Appendix H.

How to apply or obtain more information: Contact the college or university of your choice as given in Appendix H.

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS

NOTE: All personnel with the exception of professional personnel, i.e. physicians, lawyers, etc., are initially employed as correctional officers and then through internal promotion are advanced into supervisory and technical positions based on merit, then education and/or experience.

Correctional Officer

Qualifications: A high school diploma or certificate of equivalency is the minimum educational requirement. There are also certain physical requirements, such as age 18-55, good physical condition, and weight commensurate with height.

Salary range and advancement potential: A one-month training school prior to actual duty assignment is conducted in the Huntsville area. Salary during the initial training period is $552/month with room, meals, uniforms, and laundry services furnished at no cost. Minimum salary upon permanent assignment is $552/month. Meals, uniforms, and equipment are provided at no cost to the employee. State owned low rent houses are sometimes available, and rentfree mobile home parks are available on most units. Bachelor officers quarters are available at no cost for employees who desire to live on the unit.

TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

NOTE: In the uniformed services, opportunities exist for promotion through competitive examination to Patrolman I, Patrolman II, Sergeant, and the higher supervisory ranks. Patrolmen may also compete for promotions to positions in the Criminal Law Enforcement Division, including Narcotics Agent, Intelligence Agent, Motor Vehicle Theft Investigator, and Texas Ranger. Law enforcement support jobs including training specialist/officer, photographer, fingerprint analyst, polygraph examiner, intelligence analyst, etc., are usually filled through the promotion of experienced DPS personnel. Few of these types of openings are filled from outside the department. Technical and professional positions are occasionally filled from the outside, but vacancies seldom occur. These include such titles as chemist-toxicologist, programmer, statistician, accountant, etc. As a general rule, a specific technical degree is mandatory.

Criminal Investigation Command (CID) Agents

Qualifications: Generally, the requirements for special agent accreditation include: U.S. citizenship, no record of unsatisfactory credit, suitability (established by background investigation), at least 22 years of age, eligible for top secret clearance, completion of two years of college (degree in field of law enforcement to qualify for warrant officer), and agree to serve two years after acceptance. In addition, you must be in good physical condition and have normal color vision. Waivers of either minimum investigative experience or minimum educational requirements may be granted to applicants who are otherwise qualified. Further, waivers of investigative experience, time in service, and time in grade requirements would be considered for applicants with a baccalaureate degree in law enforcement.

Salary range and advancement potential: Entrance level is generally W-1. Promotion is not guaranteed but it is automatic if your performance on the job is satisfactory.

Geographic locations: If you are selected for appointment, your initial assignment, operational mission permitting, will be to one of the three Army installations listed on your preference statement. During the first weeks following your appointment you will complete necessary administrative processing at your first duty station. During your first year, you will be programmed for attendance at a Warrant Officer Orientation Course of approximately two or three weeks, where you will receive training in basic military subjects. The location and exact subject matter of this orientation course has not been finalized as of this date. You will also be scheduled for attendance at the Criminal Investigation Course, United States Army Military Police School, Fort Gordon, Georgia. Duration of the criminal investigation course is approximately eight weeks. Upon successful completion of the CI course, you will be returned to your initial unit of assignment.

UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE

Postal Inspector

Qualifications: Applicants are rated in competition with other applicants on the basis of general and specialized experience. All applicants must have at least three years of general experience to be considered. Successful completion of four full years of study leading to a bachelor's degree may be substituted for three years of general experience. Possession of a law degree or a master's degree in law enforcement related to curriculum or public or business administration will be given consideration in the area of specialized experience. All candidates are required to participate in a written test. The following standards must also be met:
Height - at least 5'4" without shoes
Weight - proportionate to height
Vision - 20/40 in one eye and 20/50 in the other without glasses, correctable to 20/20

Salary range and advancement potential: Entrance salaries are determined on the basis of the total qualifications of candidates as determined by written test, interview, and investigation. Generally speaking, candidates with a bachelor's degree from an accredited college who have little or no prior investigative background may anticipate an entrance level of PES-16 ($12,048). If the appointee progresses satisfactorily he will be promoted to PES-19 ($14,353) at the completion of 18 months service with a pay increase ranging from 5% to 15%. After completion of 24 months of satisfactory service the trainee will be promoted to PES-21 ($16,482). Upon promotion to PES-21, the inspector will no longer be in a trainee status and future promotion will be based entirely on merit and the availability of higher level positions.

Geographic locations: All persons selected will undergo a period of eight weeks of basic training at the Inspection Service Training Facility, Bethesda, Maryland. This period is followed by four weeks of field training at a field location in the division to which the trainee will be assigned. The trainee will then be assigned to a domicile location for completion of the forty-two month training period in a structured on-the-job training program. Candidates must be willing to relocate to any point in the United States or Puerto Rico.
