Denver, Colorado 80202

Dear Mayor McNichols:

The 1981 Annual Report of the Denver Police Department reflects the continuing commitment to excellence in serving and protecting the citizens of our city. I take pride in submitting this report to you.

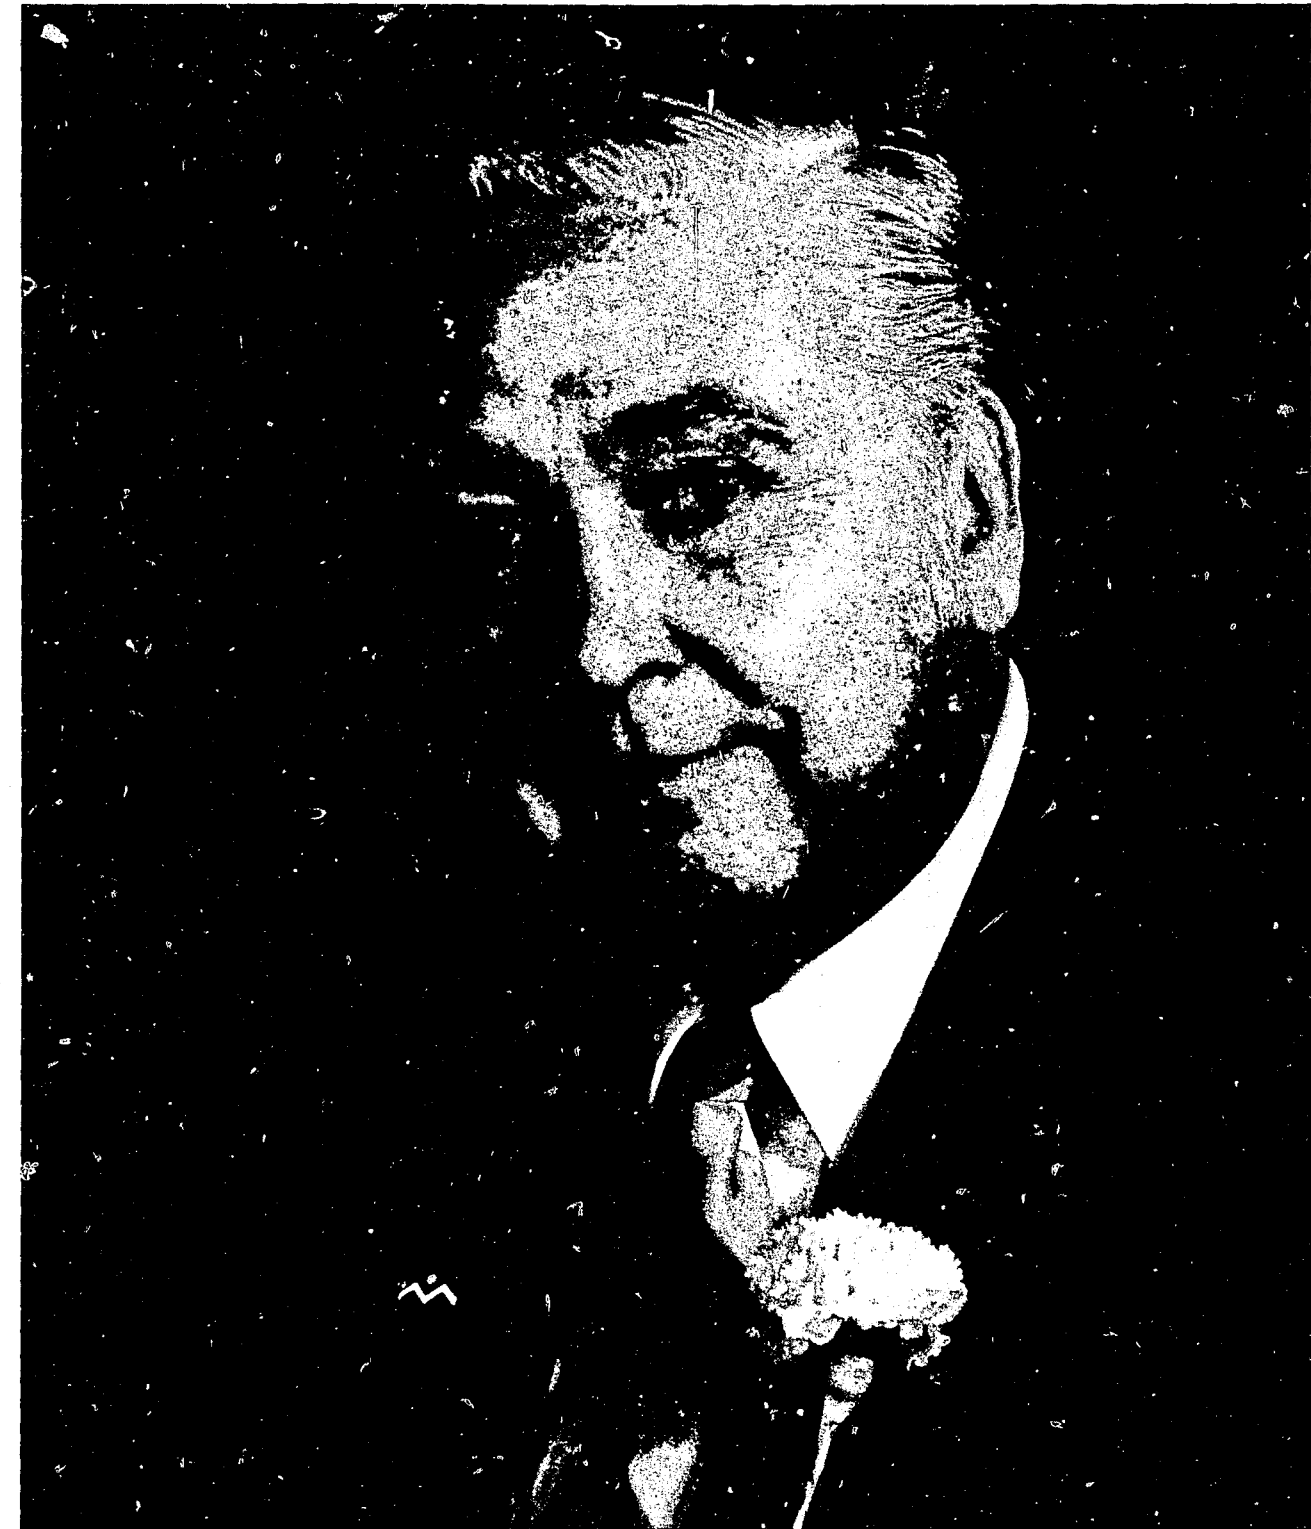

During this period of dwindling resources and greater demands for effectiveness, a spirit of cooperation has surfaced among our officers to insure the department's ability to meet the challenge. This professional dedication is testimony to the high caliber officers we have in the organization. Their attention to duty and accomplishment of the police mission have earned my confidence. I commend them.

Your concern and support for this department, directed by Chief of Police Arthur G. Dill, is deeply appreciated by me personally as well as the officers and civilian personnel who serve with great dignity, loyalty, and pride. Denver is indeed fortunate to have a man of Chief Dill's national stature at the helm. Under his leadership, the department has been able to attract top personnel and meet today's challenge of increasing crime problems.

Respectfully,

 Room 350 - City and County Building
 Denver, Colorado 80202

Dear Mayor McNichols:

With great pleasure, I respectfully submit the Denver Police Department's Annual Report for the year of 1981. Incorporated in this report is information which reflects our accomplishments with the increasing struggle to check and control crime in our City while responding to the needs of our citizens.

The increase of crime was horrendous during the first quarter of 1981. However, the Patrol Division, with assistance from the Special Crime Attack Team, the Special Services Unit, Juvenile Prevention Unit and Traffic Operations coupled with active citizen group participation, brought these statistics to a reasonable level by the end of the year. This decrease has continued into 1982, and the commendable performance of all Department personnel is recognized and appreciated in this joint effort.

On behalf of the entire Department, may I take this opportunity to express to you our sincere appreciation for your continued interest and encouragement.

Respectfully,

Arthur G. Dill

Hidden Camera Project

The most beneficial investigative aid to the clearance of an incidence of crime is an accurate description of the offender. Robbery victims especially, despite the person to person contact with an offender, generally provide the poorest descriptions which makes an investigation more lengthy and difficult. Even after an arrest is made and the case is filed, this problem with identification also causes difficulty at the time of trial. To alleviate this and thereby enhance the prosecution, the Hidden Camera Project was initiated.

Early in 1979 a grant from the federal government enabled the purchase of forty-five cameras to be installed at different locations throughout the City of Denver. The purpose was to identify more robbery suspects and eliminate the problem of identification at time of trial. The cameras are activated by remote control devices and take high quality photographs while the robbery is in progress. These photographs can then be quickly developed and distributed throughout the area to facilitate the identification of the suspect.

The objective of the grant was to significantly increase robbery clearances by arrest in those businesses where the hidden cameras were installed as opposed to those where there were no cameras. It was hoped that the proportion of convictions for commercial aggravated robberies where photographs were taken would be higher and the cost of processing a robbery case from the time of initial police response to court disposition would be significantly reduced.

Before the cameras were installed, an in-depth study was conducted by the Denver Anti-Crime Council. Their computer analyses identified eighty business sites which had been the scene of four or more robberies during the period from February, 1978 through November, 1979. Together, officers of the Robbery Unit assigned to this project and consultants from the Anti-Crime Council selected forty businesses in which they placed hidden cameras. No cameras were installed in the remaining forty businesses. This became the control group. Five cameras were not permanently installed, but were retained for immediate use in any business that might suddenly become the scene of frequent robberies.

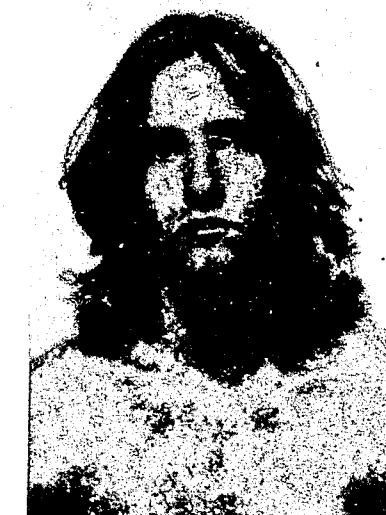

The cameras were received the first week of March, 1980, and by the following week had been installed at the selected sites. A system was devised where each location was to be checked every seven to ten days to insure the cameras were functioning properly and correctly positioned. A file was begun identifying each location and recording all the activity of the cameras. A training program was conducted to qualify all members of the Robbery Unit in the use of the cameras and removal of the film. Instruction in the operation of the cameras at the sites was done by the managers of the businesses. Several false activations occurred at first, but as employees became more familiar with the camera use, this diminished considerably.

Less than a week after the cameras were installed, the first photographs were obtained. In the first four months of operation, twenty-two robberies were reported at the target sites. Twelve of these were cleared by the Hidden Camera Project. Some of the photographs were unusable, but ten suspects were identified which resulted in an initial fifty-four percent clearance rate.

In the last twenty-three months of the camera operations, there have been one hundred twenty-three robberies at the site locations. Sixty-five photos were obtained, and thirty-nine suspects were identified. As a direct result of the cameras, seven cases were unfounded, forty-four suspects were arrested, and sixty-one cases were verified. As a net result of the project, an additional forty-eight cases were filed and one hundred nine cases exceptionally cleared by arrest.

To date there has been a one hundred percent conviction rate on the Hidden Camera Project's filings. Of these only one pled not guilty but was later convicted. The percentage of clearances due to the project is dramatic when compared with the last four years' average clearance rate for all aggravated robberies. The Hidden Camera Project's clearance rate has been sixty percent as opposed to the four year average of thirty-five percent for locations without the cameras. Due to the success of the program, the Denver Anti-Crime Council has provided funds for the Department to obtain an additional twenty cameras for use in this area. To quote a somewhat trite phrase, "Smile! You're on candid camera!" might have new meaning, at least, to potential stick-ups in Denver.
