INTRODUCTION

As part of its continuing effort to upgrade the quality and availability of criminal justice data in Illinois, the Statistical Analysis Center (SAC) presents the following report on data maintained by the Circuit Court of Cook County. Because Cook County processes by far the largest number of criminal cases in Illinois, it was selected as the starting point for a Statewide project on the availability of Courts data. This preliminary report is designed to aid the researcher or policy maker interested in studying cases processed in the Cook County Court.

In three sections, the report provides a brief and basic guide to the formal organization of the Court, discusses in somewhat greater detail the procedures by which criminal cases are presented, and examines at length the sources of useful data which are currently generated by or are available through the court system. In addition, the four appendices to this report contain several samples of the forms used and the statistical reports regularly produced by the courts.

THE ORGANIZATION OF THE COOK COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT

Any study which contemplates the use of Cook County courts data must begin with an understanding of how the court system operates. Structurally, the Cook County criminal court system is the only one of its kind in the state of Illinois, and a full description of the court's intricacies is beyond the scope of this report. Instead, the following section will give the reader a basic introduction to the formal aspects of criminal court organization in Cook County.

Description of the Illinois Court System

Overall administrative control of the courts in Illinois is vested in the Supreme Court of the state. The court carries out this responsibility through its Administrative Office which is directly responsible to the Chief Justice. Although the mandate of the office is rather loosely defined (Administrative Office of the Illinois Courts, 1977: 78), at least one of its major activities is of substantial interest to researchers. This is the collection and compilation of statistics concerning the number, kinds and dispositions of cases in the various components of the judicial system. To facilitate this process, the office solicits monthly reports from the clerks of the various courts in the state, compiles and in some cases transforms them, and publishes them in the form of a yearly report. In addition, a monthly summary of Cook County statistics is compiled and submitted to the judges of the court. Sample monthly reports are shown in Appendix B. 1

The Circuit Courts are the courts of general jurisdiction, the trial courts, for virtually all legal proceedings in Illinois. Civil and criminal cases are disposed of in the Circuit Courts, on the basis of the evidence in such matters. Cases in which retrials have been granted are also handled by the Circuit Courts. Appeals from Circuit Court decisions must be based on procedural issues, and go either to the Illinois Appellate Court (the intermediate court of appeals) or directly to the Iïlinois Supreme Court. Of the twenty-one judicial circuits in Illinois, only two consist of a single county, the 18th Circuit (Du Page County) and the Cook County Circuit; all others contain two or more contiguous counties.

The form and content of these monthly reports has recently changed. Appendix B contains a monthly report for June of 1977, and a report in the new form for February, 1979. Anthony Valaika of the Administrative Office of the Illinois Courts deserves our gratitude for supplying the new report and other helpful information regarding the data maintained by his office.

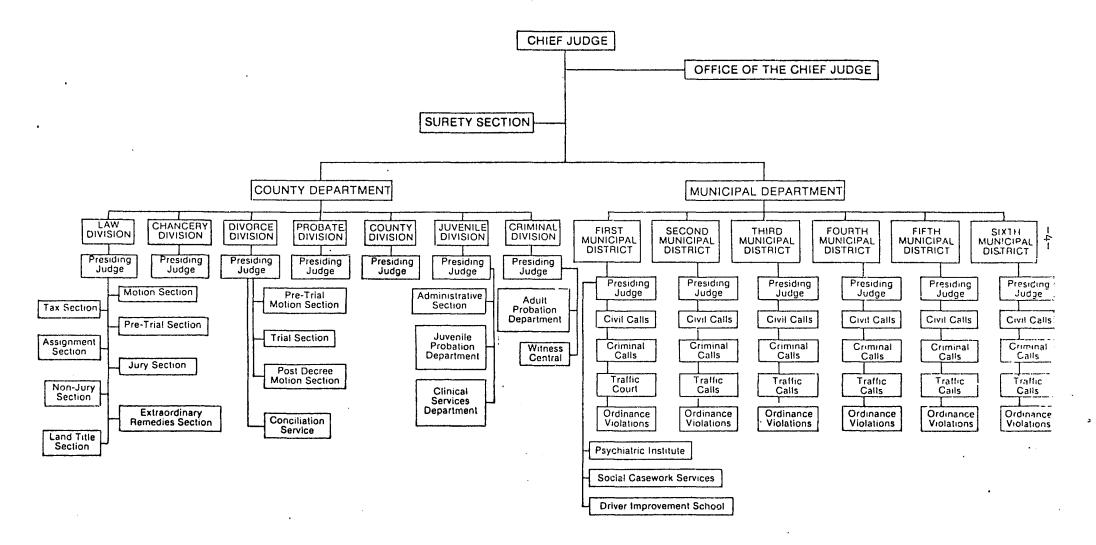

Immediate administrative control over the operation of a Circuit Court is delegated to the Chief Judge, who is elected by and serves at the pleasure of the judges of the court. The role of Chief Judge does not appear to be clearly defined, although it seems to have considerable influence over the assignment of judges, budgetary matters, changes in the organization and procedures of the court, appointment of the Public Defender, and negotiations between the judiciary and other branches of government. The Chief Judge in Cook County is Harry G. Comerford.

Description of the Circuit Court of Cook County

The organization of the Circuit Court in Cook County, illustrated in Figure 1, is unique in the state and complicates the work of the researcher. The basic difference between this and the other circuits is that it is divided into two departments, each of which handles criminal cases, and each of which is a distinct administrative unit. The major divisions of the Cook County Circuit Court are the Municipal Department and the County Department.

The Municipal Department handles a wide variety of civil cases as well as traffic offenses, misdemeanors, and a large number of felony cases. The County Department encompasses five Civil Divisions, the Juvenile Division, and the Criminal (or Felony) Division. As will be discussed in the next section of this report, felonies may be initiated by several methods in either the Municipal or the County Department. Therefore, the researcher must become familiar with these differing processes and the data collection and analysis problems which they present.

The Municipal Department is subdivided into six Municipal districts, each of which is administered by a presiding judge. These districts are geographically based as illustrated in Figure 2; the First District is the city of Chicago, and Districts Two through Six cover the suburban area. The Districts are in turn subdivided into Branches, largely on the basis of the types of cases they handle. Appendix A lists the locations of the Branches which make up the First Municipal District.

The First District differs from the suburban districts in that no felony trials are heard there. Preliminary hearings are held in all Municipal Districts, but in the First District only those felony cases in which the defendant enters a guilty plea, or which are dismissed are disposed of in the Municipal District. Felony trials from District One take place in the County Department Criminal Division. Felony trials are held in the suburban districts, but at the option of the state's attorney, a trial can be transferred to the County Department Criminal Division. This option is frequently exercised when a notorious case is involved.

Unlike the geographically-based districts of the Municipal Department, divisions in the County Department are defined by the types of cases which they handle. Hence, within the County Department, the Criminal Division handles only felony cases, and the branches or courtrooms which make up the Actually, the specialization of judges and courtrooms is more prevalent in the First District than any of the others since the volume of cases in the city is much higher than in the suburban districts. Figures for criminal cases begun in 1977 indicate that nearly 6 times as many criminal cases were begun in the 1st District (301,603) as in all the suburban districts combined (51,022) (Administrative Office of the Illinois Courts, 1977: 181). This difference in volume leads to some differences in record keeping which will be discussed later in this report.

These branch court locations, and the judges assigned to the Criminal Division courtrooms may have changed since this list was published. The lists are included here only to demonstrate the number and functions of these branches and courtrooms.

Criminal Division sometimes specialize in particular felony cases. Appendix  $\hbox{A contains a listing of the Criminal Division courtrooms and the judges assigned to them.} \\ ^4$

By virtue of their locations, the Criminal Division Branches tend to specialize according to defendants' custody status. Because of their proximity to the county jail, the branch courts in the Criminal Courts Building at 26th and California deal mainly with defendants in custody. Defendants who are out on bound are assigned primarily to courtrooms in the Daley Center. Newly-constructed courtrooms at 1340 S. Michigan were designed to specialize in the processing of recidivists' cases; these courtrooms typically handle in-custody defendants.

For statistical reporting of Cook County Circuit Court activity, the Administrative Office of the Illinois Courts receives separate monthly reports from the clerks of each of the Districts in the Municipal Department and each of the Divisions in the County Department. In terms of criminal cases, the reports focus on the total number of cases processed, backlogs, felonies disposed of at the municipal level and at the county level, and the major categories of dispositions (e.g., conviction or acquittal by plea, bench trial or jury trial). Figure 3 presents a sample report from the Criminal Division of the County Department to the Administrative Office. 5

The Annual Report of the Administrative Office of the Illinois Courts gives somewhat more detailed information, particularly regarding the operation of the Criminal Division (see pages 180-201 of the 1977 Report). Here, statistics are classified by type of offense, disposition, and sentence. The annual report takes about nine to ten months after the first of the year to be completed and published. The monthly summaries done for the Cook County Circuit Court (illustrated in Appendix B) are prepared by the Administrative Office within three or four weeks after the end of the month.

Summary

While the rest of Illinois is divided into judicial circuits which handle all types of legal matters, Cook County is a special case. The Cook County Circuit Court is divided into a Municipal and a County Department. The two Departments are subdivided geographically and/or functionally, as follows: Municipal District One covers Chicago only, and Districts Two through Six cover the Cook County suburbs. These Municipal courts process all kinds of cases, including felonies, though District One handles felonies to disposition only if there is a plea or dismissal. The County Department takes in the whole county, but its criminal caseload is confined to felonies; it functions as the trial court for all felony cases from Municipal District One and for some cases transferred from the suburbs.

The next section of this report will describe the actual processing of felony cases in Cook County Circuit Court, to prepare the researcher for working with the different methods of record-keeping employed by the two Departments.

THE PROCESSING OF FELONY CASES IN COOK COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT

Criminal cases are of three types: felony, misdemeanor and quasicriminal (ordinance violations). Of these three, felonies are the most serious and present the greatest procedural complexities. Because of these factors and because felonies invoke the greatest public interest, this report will deal primarily with the manner in which felony matters are processed in Cook County. Only those procedures which are common to most cases and which are likely to be of interest to most researchers are discussed.

PROCESSING OF FELONY CASES BEGUN IN THE MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT

Most felony cases in Cook County begin with an arrest by the local (city) police department. Occasionally, cases begin with an indictment by the (county) Grand Jury, followed by sheriff's arrest. In the typical felony case, the defendant's first court appearance takes place in a branch court of the Municipal Department. This "initial appearance" must take place "without unnecessary delay." (Illinois Revised Statutes, 1975, Ch.38, sec. 109-1).

Usually, arrestees are brought before the nearest judge within a few working hours of the arrest. The purposes of the initial appearance are to advise defendants as to the charges being brought against them and of their right to counsel, and to set bail. The judge may also proceed with the "preliminary examination" at this point, reviewing the State's evidence to determine whether there is probable cause to believe the defendant has committed an offense.

For misdemeanors, bail is usually set by the desk sergeant at the lockup, in accordance with guidelines set by the Illinois Supreme Court.

Usually, however, the "preliminary examination" or "probable cause hearing" will take place at the defendant's second court appearance. Such hearings are required by Illinois statute in all felony cases begun by complaint (after arrest with or without a warrant) or information (issued by the State's Attorney), but may be waived by the defendant. All other felony cases must proceed by grand jury indictment unless the defendant "understandingly waives" this requirement. Hence, the usual procedure in Cook County is for the police to file a complaint in the Municipal Department; the judge then rules on the probable cause issue and either sends the case on to the Grand Jury for indictment, or dismisses the case.

The State's Attorney may also file an information against the defendant or seek an indictment at any point in this process, especially if the judge finds "no probable cause." More often than not, though, the prosecutor will drop such cases or wait for further police investigation. Either defense or prosecution may choose to dispose of cases in the Municipal Department by guilty plea or dismissal, and in Districts Two through Six, felony cases may be tried in the Municipal Department. Thus relatively few felonies ever reach the County Department. The researcher who wants to study felony court processing in Cook County should be aware that the more accessible County Department data present only a partial picture, without the Municipal Department data which are much harder to obtain. The County Department data reflect only those cases which either bypassed the Municipal Department (direct grand jury indictments) or survived the Municipal Department's screening process.

To summarize, there are a number of possible paths which felony cases begun in the Municipal Department may take:

 Defendant waives the right to a preliminary hearing and pleads guilty to the complaint or information, and is sentenced in the Municipal Department.

- 2) Judge finds probable cause to hold defendant for prosecution by indictment, but defendant pleads guilty to the complaint or information, and is sentenced in the Municipal Department.
- 3) Judge finds no probable cause to hold defendant, and State's Attorney or defendant moves to dismiss the charge. Case is disposed of in the Municipal Department.
- 4) Judge finds no probable cause but State's Attorney seeks an indictment from the grand jury. If an indictment is returned, case may be disposed of in Criminal Court (County Department).
- 5) Felony charges are reduced to misdemeanors and defendant pleads guilty or demands trial. Case disposed of in the Municipal Department.
- 6) Judge finds probable cause to hold defendant, and case is referred to grand jury which will probably return an indictment.

  Case may be disposed of in Criminal Court (County Department).
- 7) Judge finds probable cause against one of several defendants but not against others. State's Attorney takes the whole case to grand jury, which may return indictments against any or all defendants. If indictments result, case may be disposed of in Criminal Court (County Department).
- 8) Defendant waives the preliminary hearing, or requests a continuance at the preliminary hearing when the State is ready to proceed.

  State's Attorney may take the case to the grand jury for indictment, or proceed on an information. Case may be disposed of in Criminal Court (County Department).

It should be noted that these paths may be and frequently are terminated by a guilty plea resulting from a negotiated settlement between the defendant and the State's Attorney.

Processing of Felony Cases Begun In the County Department

The workload of the Cook County Grand Jury has decreased significantly since October 1975 when a change in the law governing the use of informations allowed prosecutors to bring cases to trial by information rather than by seeking indictments. Previously, informations could substitute for indictments only when the defendant agreed to plead guilty. Now that the grand jury has fewer cases before it, the State's Attorney's office in turn has greater flexibility to use either method of initiating prosecution. This has resulted in the practice of seeking indictment as a way of speeding disposition where the defendant has postponed the preliminary hearing.

The deliberations of the grand jury can result in any one of three possible outcomes. The jury can return an indictment (true bill); it can refuse to indict (no bill); or it can recommend that the case be treated as a misdemeanor and send it back to the Municipal Department. A prosecutor wishing not to prosecute must make that intention clear in court by moving to dismiss the charge; the prosecutor cannot stop the processing of the case informally.

The first step in the processing of a case in the County Department is arraignment. At the arraignment, the judge simply reads the formal charges to the defendant and asks for the defendant's plea in response. But because this highly routine procedure is the first stage in the trial process where the defendant must plead, defendants are usually represented by an attorney at this point. Bail must also be reset for the proceeding in the County Department, since bail set in the Municipal Department applies only to proceedings at that level and is technically refundable when those proceedings are complete. Probably the most frequent outcome of the bail setting process is for bail to be held over from the Municipal Department. Motions for reduction or elimination of bail are usually postponed until after the case has been assigned to a trial judge. Once the case has been assigned to a new judge, it is often possible for the bail motion to be heard on that same day. In the County Department all arraignments are heard by the presiding judge, Judge Fitzgerald. He assigns cases to the other judges based on the decision of a computer which combines random selection with the satisfaction of certain geographical and court room specialization requirements.

After the arraignment, the typical felony case proceeds by way of negotiation between the State's Attorney and defense attorney. From this point on, disposition of the case depends on the many factors which influence the choices between quick and slow adjudication. In Cook County, the majority of felony charges are disposed of by dismissal or guilty pleas, leaving a small percentage which go to trial and most of those are decided by a County Department judge rather than by a jury. Dismissed charges may be reinstated later, depending on the type of dismissal employed, but guilty plea cases are completed as soon as the judge determines that the defendant has entered the plea voluntarily. In very rare instances, a tried case may be retried in the County Department, but usually the final judgement signals the close of the case at that level.

There are three forms of dismissal on motion of the State, and although the Administrative Office of the Illinois Courts does not count them separately, the Clerk's records show them as "S.O.L." (Striken with Leave to Reinstate), "DWP" (Dismissed for Want of Prosecution) and "Nolle Pros" (short for Nolle Prosequi, indicating the prosecution will proceed no further). See Appendix C for a full listing of disposition codes used in the Municipal and County Departments.

Summarizing seven possible paths which felony cases begun in the County Department may take:

- 1) At arraignment on the indictment, defendant pleads guilty (with or without the advice of counsel) to the charges named. This is a rare occurrence, as counsel is required to be appointed at this stage if the defendant has not retained a lawyer. The established practice is for defendants to plead not guilty, and to ask for a continuance, to afford time for consultation between client and counsel.
- 2) At arraignment, defendant pleads not guilty and case is assigned to a particular judge for adjudication later:
  - a. Prosecutor and defense attorney negotiate as to what charges may be dropped or sentence offered in exchange for defendant's plea of guilty. They reach an agreement, which is then ratified by the judge assigned to the case, and defendant pleads guilty accordingly.
  - b. Same as 2a.) above but defendant does not agree to plead and demands trial. After numerous continuances, the State's case becomes weaker and a more attractive sensence offer induces defendant to plead guilty. Case is disposed of by plea.
  - c. Same as 2a.) above, but no satisfactory agreement is reached at any time up until the trial date. However, in the course of the trial, defendant reconsiders and decides to plead guilty after all. Case is disposed of by plea.

- d. Same as 2b.)above, but the weakness of the State's case instead strengthens defendant's resolve to go to trial, and State moves to dismiss the charges. Case is disposed of by dismissal.
- e. The charge is a very serious one (e.g., murder) and defendant asserts his or her innocence, and/or the State's sentence offer is no more appealing than the sentence expected on conviction; no agreement is reached at any point. Case proceeds to trial, and defendant is convicted; the defense moves for a new trial, and the motion is denied or (infrequently) granted. If motion is denied, the case is closed in the Circuit Court; if granted, it must be retried in the Circuit Court.
- f. Same as 2e.)above, but defendant is acquitted. Case is closed in the Circuit Court.

Summary

The purpose of this section was to guide the reader through the two-level system of processing felony cases in Cook County. Most cases enter the courts at the Municipal District level, via police complaint. In the Municipal District, bond is set, and preliminary hearings are held to determine whether there is probable cause to bind defendants over for trial and final adjudication. Many cases are dismissed and many others are disposed of by trial or guilty plea in a Municipal District, so they never go to the County Department.

Felony cases from Municipal District One, and some felony cases from Districts Two through Six are transferred to the County Department Criminal Division, also called Felony Court, for trial. Defendants are asked to plead to the charges; generally, plea negotiations begin after a plea of not guilty. From this point, cases may be settled through plea bargaining, dismissed on motion of the State, or tried by a judge or jury.

In the next sections, the Clerk's office will be described and its manual and computerized record-keeping systems will be explained.

THE CLERK'S OFFICE AND THE NATURE OF COURT RECORDS

The Organization And Role of The Clerk's Office

The Clerk of the Circuit Court is responsible for keeping the records of the court. To accomplish this task, the Clerk's office is organized along lines which reflect the organization of the court. For instance, one subdivision of the Clerk's office keeps the records of the Criminal Division, and each of the districts of the Municipal Department has its own office.

The records of the court are of two types, legal and management; both are useful for research purposes. The former involves the case document file which is kept on each case brought before the court. Each case must have a complete written record of each legal event which takes place throughout its processing. This record is kept in a file maintained by the Clerk's office. The file must be in the courtroom whenever the case is brought before the court, and is updated by the clerk in the courtroom after each appearance. These records provide the legal record of the case for use on appeal or in pursuit of other legal remedies; it must be maintained for several years after the case's final disposition. The structure of this file will be discussed shortly.

The second type of record maintained by the Clerk's office is statistical in nature and is kept primarily for management purposes. Certain aggregate figures regarding the number, kind and disposition of cases brought before the court are generated on a regular basis. In addition to being supplied to the Administrative Office of the Illinois Courts, these figures are used in reports published directly by the Clerk's office.

They are also distributed to the court and to governmental and non-governmental agencies concerned with the operation of the judicial system.

Description of The Clerk's Manual Record System

Probably the most common source of data for studying criminal case processing is the case document file. The case file is a legal document and is likely to be the most complete source of information on the events involved in the processing of a case. As a source of research data its completeness is a significant advantage. In many Circuit courts outside of Cook County, where automated data processing systems are unavailable, it is the only source of individual case level data. It also has disadvantages which can make computerized data more attractive.

A significant disadvantage in Cook County is the case file's complexity and frequent illegibility. Documents are often not arranged in chronological order, and when located, may be difficult to read. At best, obtaining information in this fashion can be time-consuming, even if all the needed files are readily available.

If research focuses on pending cases, availability of files can also become a problem. Files may be located in the courtroom where the case is being handled rather than in a central location. The substantial time consumed in using case files almost always necessitates sampling, and without a computerized listing of cases, it is often difficult to generate a sample having the particular characteristics in which the researcher is interested.

Despite these limitations, and despite the existence of computerized records in Cook County, the case file remains the only source of certain kinds of information. For example, the computer record does not contain data on when the defendant demands trial, or consistent records of the amounts of bail set, or whether or not bond is made. In studies requiring information such as this, computerized records can still be extremely helpful since they can assist in defining a sample and can supply a good deal of the necessary information. The case file generally consists of the following documents:

- Arrest Report
- Complaint

Both of these documents are supplied by the arresting agency. They describe the alleged criminal acts of the defendant, detail the charges, and give demographic information about the defendant.

- Preliminary Hearing Court Sheet
- D Bond

These documents are issued by the Municipal Department during the initial stages of the case's processing. The court sheet documents all dispositions in that Department. A bond sheet will only be present if bond is made.

Witness Memorandum

This document is prepared by the State's Attorney office when the case is initiated in the County Department and summarizes much of the important information found in the other sources listed here.

- Court Order Sheet or "Half Sheet"
  - Used by the clerk in the courtroom to document all dispositions and court orders.
- Indictment or Information

These documents are prepared by the State's Attorney office.

In many cases, needed information can be obtained from more than one document. The following information can be obtained from any of the listed documents:

Case files are stored for a number of years in a vault at the Criminal Division Clerk's office at 26th and California. Access to the vault is controlled, but may be obtained through the Clerk's office. Limited work space is available in the vault for research purposes. Files are arranged by case number, and an alphabetical index of case numbers is available. Case files are also color-coded for identification. The location of missing files is noted through the use of markers where the missing files should be.

The Development Of The Clerk's Computer Systems

The extremely large volume of criminal cases processed by the Cook

County Circuit Court (it is thought to be one of the largest in the world) led in 1966 to the experimental use of computers for immediate court management purposes in the Municipal Departments. A record of each criminal case, focusing primarily on the next court date and location, was entered into the computer by way of batch-processed punched cards. This facilitated the production of daily court sheets for each courtroom. The court sheets listed the cases which were scheduled days before the court date telling the Clerk's office which case files to have ready for which locations.

In 1971, a private consulting firm (Touche, Ross & Co.) was commissioned, with the support of a grant from the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission (ILEC), to design a more comprehensive and versatile computer system.

They supplied a rather intricate design called the Clerk's Information System (CIS), which has to date been only partially implemented. Failure of the projected system to be implemented on schedule may have been the result, in part, of an overly complex and ambitious design.

Implementation of the CIS began in the First District of the Municipal Department around 1973 and followed within about six months in the other districts. In the estimation of one employee in the Clerk's office, however, the data did not become fairly reliable until 1975.

It soon became clear that a total implementation of the CIS would take some time to accomplish. To meet the short-term needs of the Criminal Division, a temporary computerized data processing system was designed and initiated in 1972. This second system will be referred to in this report as the County Felony System (CFS). The CFS did not have the capabilities of the CIS for immediate retrieval of data; nonetheless, it facilitated the production of a number of useful statistical reports and handled such functions as the production of daily court sheets.

In the years since their introduction, both the CIS and CFS have probably improved in efficiency and reliability; at least, those individuals associated with the systems believe this to be true. However, the existence of two separate data processing systems creates substantial problems for the researcher. Each system is discussed in detail below, but a general problem is the lack of an interface between them. When a felony case leaves the Municipal Department and is bound over to the County Department, the CIS record is terminated and a new record is begun in the CFS. The new record is given a new number and nowhere in the record does the old Municipal number appear. No list of cross-referenced numbers is available, and the two computer systems are not directly linked. The result of this division is that it is currently impossible through any single computer report to obtain a complete record of the processing of any felony case that was initiated at the Municipal level.

A unification of the Municipal and County criminal records in one data processing system would rectify this problem. This would be accomplished by the implementation of the full CIS design and is a goal which the Clerk's office has long sought to attain. According to the statistician for the Administrative Office of the Courts, the initial steps toward unification have recently been taken. Computer programs and report formats for the Criminal Division are being developed, and the full conversion should occur in 1979.

Current Operation of The Clerk's Information System (CIS)

Information regarding the processing of felony, misdemeanor, and quasicriminal cases in the Municipal Department is currently being handled by the Clerk's Information System (CIS). The system in its present state has the capacity to store and integrate information about each criminal case from arrest to final disposition in the Municipal Department or until the case is transferred to the Criminal Division of the County Department. Although the system was originally designed to have parallel on-line and off-line components, only the on-line component is currently in use. To say that the system operates on-line means that information is stored in a manner which allows it to be immediately retrieved in visual or printed form. The visual display of information is accomplished through the use of screens called cathode ray tubes (CRT) which are attached to terminals. These terminals are also used for entering data and are located in the offices of the district clerks.

Information is stored in the CIS by "case" and by charge. In all Municipal Districts, an attempt is made to group all charges and defendants involved in a single incident into a single case. "Case" in this sense means all charges arising from one incident. This case is given a single number and all records are associated with and identified by that number. All charges and defendants involved in a single incident are identified by one case number, but individual charges against each defendant within the case are identified as well. Each charge is given its own number for the purpose of generating court sheets and statistical reports. That is, all available CIS statistical reports reflect charges, not cases. In this way, felonies, misdemeanors and other categories of offenses can be counted separately.

A computer record of a case is established through a process which the Clerk's office calls "Initiation." Initiation means that a Clerk's office employee enters basic information about the defendant and the charge onto the computer by means of a CRT. In Chicago (District One), the information is taken from documents supplied to the Clerk's office by the police agency which is filing the complaint. Suburban Districts Two through Six initiate computerized case records using more information (input) than the complaint. They enter data from the complaint and usually from the arrest report or arrest card as well. The following information typically forms the basis for case initiation in the Clerk's computer system for Districts Two through Six:

- Defendant's Name
- Case Initiation date
- Arrest date
- Booking number (Arresting agency)
- Sex
- Race
- Address
- Height/Weight
- Eye/Hair color
- Complexion
- Arresting Agency Code
- Charge(s)
- Bond number and amount if bond is made (nothing is recorded if bond is not made)
- Next Court date, time and location

Once the computer record is initiated when a complaint is filed, the CRT operator updates the record after each subsequent court appearance. Information regarding the disposition of the case and the scheduling of the next court date and location are communicated to the operator by the clerk in the courtroom, through the use of a Daily Court Sheet (illustrated in Figure 4). The court sheets for each courtroom list the cases which appeared in the courtroom that day and their dispositions and schedulings. Codings are done on certain items, such as the dispositions and judges, by a coder working with the CRT operator. These sheets are then used directly by the operator to update records. Disposition codes are listed in Appendix C.

Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois HEADING J · CASENLMEER MORGAN M. FINLEY, CLERK OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY

Under the current CIS arrangement, case initiation differs between the city and suburban districts because the First District must handle such a large volume of cases. In order to process the Chicago cases more quickly, streamlined procedures for case initiation were introduced in the First District. Instead of using the more detailed complaints and arrest records as the suburban districts do, the First District initiates cases using "transmittal lists," which are simply the lists which the police send to the courts to inform them of the names and charges of defendants to be brought to court. This procedure saves considerable time, but limits the amount of information available to the CRT operator (and therefore the researcher), as the following listing demonstrates.

- Defendant's Name
- Chicago booking number and numbers of other defendants being charged in the incident
- Charge
- Case Initiation date
- Arrest date
- Identification (IR) number (from Chicago Police Identification Department fingerprint file)

Once a case has received a final disposition, a computer record is maintained in the on-line file for a short time before being transferred to a storage tape. Cases which are discharged are maintained for a minimum of 30 days, while those involving orders which may be reinstated are maintained for 90 days. Old cases are purged from the active file and placed on a

Actually, more extensive case initiation procedures would be wasteful for the 1st District to utilize, at least with regard to felony cases, until the pending unification of the CIS and CFS systems takes place. When the proposed unification takes place, the First District plans to expand its felony case initiation process to the fuller version. After unification, then, a rather complete computer record of the processing of felony cases will be available to the researcher.

National Institute of Justice United States Department of Justice Washington, D.C. 20531 storage tape approximately once a month. The storage tape is called a Case History Tape and will be maintained permanently.  $^{10}$  This means that the researcher can be fairly sure that case history information exists on tape for all felony cases which began in the Municipal Department processing in 1975 or later.

CIS Statistical Reports

If the data entry process in District One is any indication, the reliability of CIS data is probably very high. A daily printout of all data entered into the system is produced and checked against the previous day's court sheets. Errors are corrected immediately by the CRT operator who made the error. Of course, mistakes made in the court sheets themselves cannot be easily monitored and appear not to be formally checked, although errors detected by the courtroom clerk at a subsequent appearance can be corrected at that time.

Besides the daily court sheets and pull lists, the Municipal Department system produces one basic monthly report, a breakdown by branch and district of the major dispositions of cases. The report gives totals for both current month and the year-to-date. This is a modification of an earlier report which did not break down the case by type, e.g., preliminary hearing, misdemeanor and traffic. For an example of each report, see Figure 5.

CIS is programmed to produce a wide variety of other reports which are not currently being generated. These reports apparently have little value for the internal management of the Clerk's office; because of this and because of the limited demand for them, it is probably inefficient for the Clerk's office to produce these reports.

&lt;sup>10</sup>Starting November 1977, certain of these tapes are being "purged" periodically. For misdemeanors and preliminary hearings, the tapes will be purged every ten (10) years, and for city ordinances, every five (5) years.

The CIS also produces a yearly case history report on all cases initiated, which is similar to that of the CFS system (see below); a twice-yearly alphabetical index of case listings, and a monthly alphabetical word index. A monthly alphabetical index of all cases purged from the active file is planned. This will be superseded every six months by a microfiche record. Also, a monthly breakdown of dispositions by crime type is contemplated, although the charge categories which will be used have not yet been decided. Copies of CIS reports are available through Bob Grossman, Chief Deputy Clerk of the First Municipal District.

Current Operation of the County Felony System (CFS)

There are two basic differences between the CIS (Municipal) and CFS (County) systems. The first involves their content. The CIS documents the processing of cases in the Municipal Department while the CFS serves the same function for the county Department. The second difference concerns how they work. The CIS is an on-line system where information can be added to and retrieved from the file instantaneously. The CFS is off-line, i.e., data are entered in batches by data cards and can only be accessed through reports.

Either system can be used as a source of research data, but the fact that the records of many cases are divided between two systems is troublesome. The source of the trouble lies in the fact that it is not easy to integrate the two separate sets of information. All information is organized by case and identified by case number, but the case number changes when the defendant is transferred within the court from the Municipal to the County Department. Although records include names in both systems, duplicate names will cause difficulty in linking records, and linking records is precisely what will need to be done where the research interest involves studying the processing of all felony cases.

The basic unit of analysis for the County system is the case. A "case" is treated in the Criminal Division as all charges arising out of a single incident. This is the same definition as that used by the Municipal Department. When an information is filed by the State's Attorney, or an indictment is returned by a grand jury, the case is given a number by the Clerk's office. Both a physical file and the computer file are labeled and indexed by that number. The computer file is started with very little information, almost all of which is taken from the indictment or information when it arrives in the Clerk's office. This includes the defendant's name, the charge, the arraignment date, judge and location. The defendant's police identification (IR) number is also sometimes included. Additional information about the case is contained in a document prepared by the State's Attorney for the grand jury; this "Witness Memorandum" is available at the time of case initiation, but generally is not used. See Appendix C for disposition codes.

New information is added to the Criminal Division's computer record following each court appearance. Information regarding dispositions, next court date, location and judge are recorded on Daily Court Sheets by the clerk in each courtroom. This information is placed on code sheets (called transmittal lists) and sent to the central data processing office at the Daley Center for key punching and cardbatch input into the computer.

The County Department computer maintains a file of active cases which is purged of cases approximately six months after their disposition. Purged cases are transferred to a Case History File for permanent storage.

Criminal Division (CFS) Statistical Reports

In contrast to the Municipal system, a number of reports are currently being generated by the County computer system. Most of these reports are produced monthly, and are listed below. Appendix D contains an example of each report, except the first. Please note that the format and content of these reports will change with the unification of court recordkeeping under the CIS.

- 1) CRFL 020; Case History Report (weekly and yearly). The yearly report contains the date, location and disposition of all court appearances for all cases pending or disposed of during the calendar year. The contents of the weekly report are more problematic. Not all previous appearances are shown and it is not possible to determine which are excluded.
- 2) CRFL 072; Summary of Indictments, Reinstatements and Disposals (weekly). This report gives weekly and year-to-date totals of the number of cases and defendants by type of case.
- 3) CRFL 074 (874); Report of Indictments (weekly). This report gives the number of indictments disposed by judge during the past week, the past month, and the year-to-date. The difference between 074 and 874, if any, is unknown.
- 4) CRFL 078; Criminal Division Statistical Report by Charge (monthly).

  Gives the number of informations, indictments and defendants by charge for the month and year-to-date.

- 5) CRFL 080; Statistical Report by Judge and Disposition (monthly).

  Shows the number of each type of disposition per judge for this month, last month, and year-to-date.

- 6) CR 090; Statistical Report by Charge and Disposition (monthly).

  Dispositions by charge are shown for each judge.

7) CR 198; Modified Case History Report (monthly). Shows cases disposed of and defendants sentenced during the month.

Very limited copies of these reports are printed. A complete set is kept at the Criminal Division Clerk's office at 26th and California, and access can be obtained through that office.

SUMMARY

This section has outlined the organization of the Cook County Circuit Court Clerk's office. The structure tends to follow that of the Circuit Court generally, with the County Department and Municipal Department maintaining separate records and submitting separate reports. Samples of regular forms and reports produced by the computer systems are presented in the text and appendices.

Each Department has the usual manual record-keeping system involving updating and storage of individual case files, which are official legal documents. The courts also maintain a certain amount of statistical information, which they use for management or administrative purposes. The case files are still the most complete, if cumbersome, record of court dispositions in Cook County.

The Municipal Department instituted an automated record-keeping system (CIS) in the First Municipal District in 1973, and later in the suburban districts. There are some differences between the city and suburban systems, particularly in the amount of data they record.

The chief problem for the researcher is that the Municipal and County computer systems are not linked directly; therefore it is not yet possible to get a single computer record of any felony case which went through both court systems.

SPRINGFIELD 62706

April 16, 1979

To the Chief Judge and the Judges of the Circuit Court of Cook County:

Enclosed herewith is the February, 1979 statistical report for the Circuit Court of Cook County.

Probate

The first "fruits" of the complex physical inventory taken in the Probate Division have been realized. For the month of February, 1979 - 1,778 cases were reported terminated. This figure reflects the largest number of cases closed in any one month in the Probate Division, and practically triples the terminations reported in January.

The inventory review began with cases filed during the year 1968. As of February 28, 1979, only 127 1968 cases remained out of a total of 11,865 cases filed that year.

And this, apparently, is only the "tip of the iceberg". In a matter of weeks the staff of the Probate Division will make their way into the 1969 files.

Sincerely,

William M. Madden Deputy Director
